OXFORD sandstone

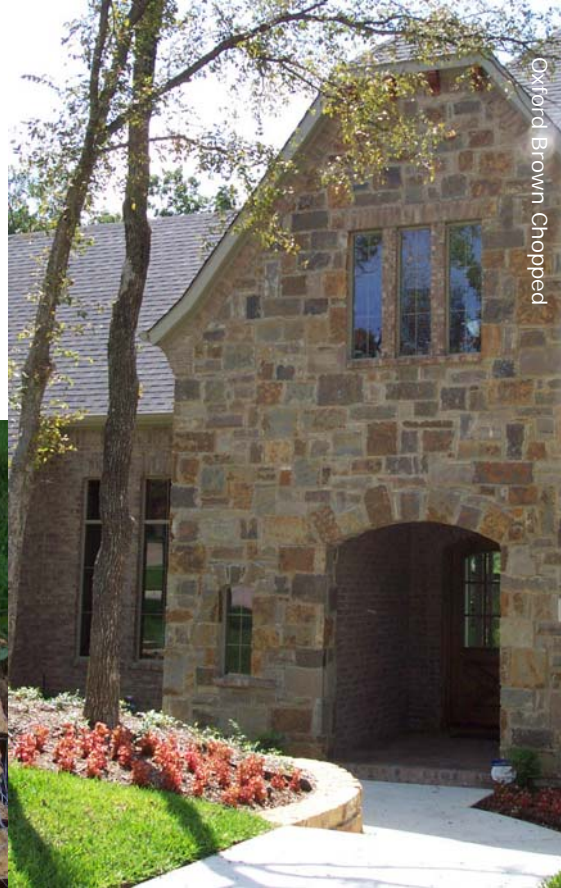

KGO Oxford exhibits dark brown and dark blue hues. It can be specified as either brown brown with some blue in it, all blue or a variation of both. This sandstone is very hard, so much so that it can easily be tumbled. Straight edge or random builders is the way to specify this material. Old world or Colonial style architecture can easily be achieved by using this product.

STANFORD sandstone

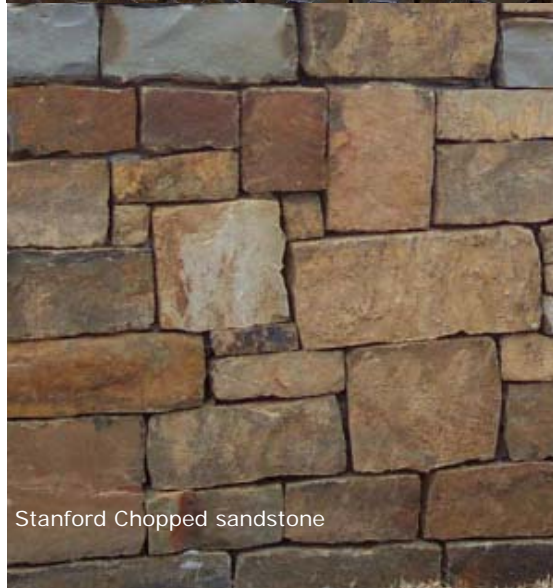

KGO Stanford is for lack of a better explanation an above average real stone brick. It's not the Palo Alto brick at Stanford, but the resemblance of brick led us to name it as Stanford. Though not a true brick per se, the resemblance of it does come out. Rusty reds and deep browns are shown throughout.
